

New Library Officially opens

It was a "soft" opening for the new Bradford West Gwillimbury Public Library at 425 Holland St. West (beside Bradford District High School) when it first opened its doors on May 24 - but now it's time to celebrate.

On Friday, June 3, the beautiful 42,000 sq. ft. Library and Cultural Centre will officially open, offering not only over 80,000 books, but also wireless access, study rooms, a computer room, community meeting rooms, Heritage Centre, children's program area, and a performance space.

It's a two-part celebration. The library will be closed to the public during the day to prepare, and there will be an invitation-only ceremony at 2 p.m., for representatives of all levels of government and invited dignitaries and guests.

The Bradford Library then reopens at 5 p.m. for a public celebration that includes cake, refreshments, hands-on activities, tours, scavenger hunts, art, music and dance. At 7 p.m., Ronald McDonald leads Storytime; at 8 p.m., there will be a performance by the Simcoe Academy of Dance.

The fun and festivities continue
