Editorial

History has been made this year at Bradford High School. What you are now reading is the first edition of the B. D. H. S. yearbook.

Bradford High has changed over the years from a two-room building to a sprawling eleven rooms, and further additions are expected in the near future. As its size increased, the students have made efforts to express the identity of the school in such ways as taking part in Commencement, and participating in inter-school sports. This yearbook is such an effort.

We on the yearbook staff did not perhaps realize the amount of work which goes into such a publication as this. The students although eager would not have proceeded far without the guidance of the teachers, especially our advisors, Mr. Bacsalmasi, Miss Hurst, Mrs. Kinnear, and Miss Nolan.

The advertising and business committee handled the arrangements competently. The co-operation received by local businessmen is very much appreciated. We hope that the community will continue to take an active interest in our school and in time look to it as the town's cultural centre.

Although there will be many another editor and staff, we are proud to have been the first.
