

Burial Place Discovered

Many will probably remember that during the last World War word was received that Walter Andrews was missing after the plane on which he was serving had been shot down. No further word had been received until recently when his mother, Mrs. Mary Andrews of Toronto received word from the Department of Defence that the Graves Committee had found where her son was buried with several other members of his crew. They were found in a small town 75 miles from Berlin. The bodies are being moved to a British cemetery in Berlin where they will be cared for and a stone erected.
