Local lawyers given plaques by province

PROVINCE

Provincial Justice Minister Earl Rowe presented plaques to Charles and Brock Evans from the Ontario government by local MPP Earl Rowe.

Charles Evans was honored for his 90th anniversary of his call to the bar, and his brother Brock was similarly honored for his 52 years in practice. The law firm on Hilliard Street has existed at its present site since 1894, when the

Evans father C.W.W. Evans opened his practice. The elder Evans grew up on a farm about five miles from Bradford in West Gathisbury. His mother was born and grew up in Bradford. Both parents taught school in Bradford, and then moved to Toronto while Mr. Evans attended Osgoode Hall Law School.

Of their seven children, three of his boys became lawyers, and the girl married a lawyer.

Charles Evans graduated Osgoode Hall in 1904 and joined his father's practice at the time of the England March Recamation project.

Eventually, Brock Evans left his Toronto practice to join his brother and father in Bradford about 30 years ago.

Charles' sons Tom and then Bob later joined the firm, so being 10 four the number of Evans in the firm Evans and Evans.

MPP EARL Rowe was in town last week to present certificates to lawyers Charles T.S. Evans, and his brother Brock Evans. The elder Evans was honored for the 90th anniversary of his call to the bar, and Brock Evans was honored on the occasion of his 52nd year of practice.
